I am a registered psychologist; can I therefore purchase psychometric tests?

If you are a psychologist who is able to provide evidence of specific training and accreditation in psychometric assessment to the standards required by PsyAsia International (which conform to international best practice standards), then yes. If not, we will require you to undertake an appropriate course of psychometric training. Having registration as a psychologist does not of course imply competence in the use of psychometric tools. We must see such competence evidenced before we are able to sell our tests to anybody. Thank you for your understanding.
